GUIDELINES FOR USING THIS WORKBOOK

We wish to welcome you to the intermediate phase Home Language Workbook. The Home Language level for the intermediate phase is intended to develop learners’ language proficiency in the communication skills required in social situations, and to develop their cognitive academic skills essential for learning across the curriculum. We hope that you will find this Workbook useful in assisting your learners to develop these competences.

The Workbook is organised according to the two-week cycles of the CAPS. You will find the overview of what will be covered in each of the two week cycles on pages 1, 35, 69 and 103 of this Workbook. Each 2-week cycle is packaged to include the following four language skills:

1. Listening and Speaking (Oral) – 2 hours per 2-week cycle

   Learners need frequent opportunities to develop their Listening and Speaking skills to enable them to collect information, solve problems and express ideas and opinions. The Workbook contains a number of speaking and listening activities which you can extend upon to ensure that learners have regular opportunities for oral practise.

2. Reading and Viewing – 5 hours per 2-week cycle

   The CAPS require learners to read and view specific texts and genres in each 2-week cycle. This includes reading: short stories, folklore, personal recounts, letters, e-mails, diary entries, drama, newspaper articles, magazine articles, radio interviews, poetry, persuasive texts, advertisements, instructions, directions and procedures. In addition, the CAPS require learners to read information text with visuals: maps, charts, tables, diagrams, mind maps, weather charts, posters, notices, pictures and graphs. You will find a good selection of these types of texts in the Workbook.

   The CAPS specify a process for reading comprising of pre-reading, reading and post reading stages. You will find a useful graphic explanation of the ‘reading process’ in the inner front cover of this book.

3. Writing and Presenting – 4 hours per 2-week cycle

   The CAPS require learners to have frequent opportunities to practise writing across a range of contexts. The Workbook provides a number of writing frames and organisers to scaffold learners’ presentations of written, visual and multi-media texts. You will find a graphic explanation of the ‘writing process’ in the back inner cover of the Workbook.

4. Language Structures and Conventions – 1 hour per 2-week cycle

   The CAPS provide a list of Language Structures and Conventions (items) that should be covered in each grade. The Workbook includes specific exercises for each of the 2-week cycles. Usually these activities include a ‘note’ explaining the language convention.

Use the Workbook together with your other resources. Consult the CAPS intermediate phase for Home Language.

For further guidance please consult the Workbook Training Manual.

It was the start of the school holidays. Charlie, who lived in Limpopo, was planting vegetables in the community garden opposite his house. As he looked up, he saw his friend Dingani jogging past.

“Hi, Dingani. What are you going to do during the school holidays?” Charlie asked.

“I am captain of the school soccer team, and we will be training every day for the big tournament,” Dingani replied. “This year, I think we can win it!”

“Wow, that’s cool!” Charlie replied.

As Dingani ran off, Charlie muttered to himself, “I wish I was in a soccer team. I’m going to start practising.”

The next week, Charlie joined Dingani at soccer practice. He played with the team, but things did not go well. He tripped over his own feet, and he even scored a goal for the other team.

At the end of the game, Charlie realised that soccer was not for him. He shuffled home and was soon back in the garden.

Just then, he saw Jan walking past. “Hi, Jan!” he called.

“What are you going to do these holidays?” Jan said, “I’m in the church choir, and I’ll be going to singing practice every day. We’re preparing for a big concert.”

Charlie sighed. “Oh, I wish I could sing,” he thought. Everyone else was doing enjoyable things, while he was spending his summer working in the garden.
Let’s write Answer this question by ticking the correct box.

Where was Charlie at the beginning of the story?

A  In the community garden
B  At school
C  On the soccer field
D  In the street

Write down two sentences that tell us that Charlie wished he had the same talents his friends had.

Write down two silly things Charlie did when he was trying to play soccer.

What were Jan’s plans for the school holidays?

How did Charlie feel about gardening after talking to Jan?

The story says that after the soccer practice, Charlie “shuffled home”.

What does this tell you about how Charlie felt?

A  He wanted to dance.
B  He was sad.
C  He was nervous.
D  He wanted to work in the garden.
Let’s read

A few weeks later, Charlie saw a pamphlet calling for young people to join a new singing group. What do you think he did? He went to see if he was good enough. But as he sang, his voice cracked and squeaked. One of the judges made a face, and Charlie knew he would not be chosen.

Charlie shuffled back home and went to the garden. “All of my friends have special talents,” he thought. “I wish I had something that I was really good at.”

For the rest of the school holidays, Charlie kept trying to find his talent, and each time he would walk home with his head down and spend his time in his garden.

Towards the end of the holidays, Charlie saw his friends Dingani and Jan again. “How was the big soccer tournament?” he asked Dingani.

“We won!” Dingani replied. “And how was the concert?” Charlie asked Jan.

“It’s tomorrow. But our choir has worked really hard, and I’m going to sing a solo!”

“Congratulations,” Charlie said to them. “I wish I had something like that to be proud of.”

“Are you joking?” Jan asked. “The vegetables in your garden are huge! They look so tasty and healthy! Every time I try to grow something, it turns brown and dies. I wish I had your talent with plants.”

“Really?” Charlie replied. “I guess I never thought gardening was something special.” He smiled. “Why don’t you both come over tomorrow to celebrate Dingani’s soccer victory? You can come for supper. We’ll eat fresh vegetables from my garden, and then we can go to Jan’s concert!”

One night when I was nine years old, I heard a commotion in the household. I found my father in my mother’s hut, lying on his back on the floor, in the midst of what seemed like an endless fit of coughing. He was ill with some type of lung disease. Soon after, my father died and my life changed completely. I had to go and live with my uncle, who would care for me and send me to school. I packed the few things I had and walked with my mother to my new home.

It was painful for me to leave Qunu. I turned and looked back at my home and the happiness I was leaving behind. I looked at the huts and the people going about their business. I looked at the stream where I had splashed and played with the other boys. My eyes rested on the three huts at my home. I left – but I could not imagine my future.

I went to live with my Uncle Jongi in Mqhekezweni, a nearby village. He was my father’s best friend. I missed Qunu and my family there, but my life with Uncle Jongi was a good one. I played with his son, Justice, and we had lots of fun. My uncle treated me like his own child. I attended a nearby one-room school and studied English, Xhosa, History and Geography. I did well at school because I tried very hard and my aunt checked my homework at night.

When I was 16, Uncle Jongi sent me to Clarkebury School. Like my father, my uncle believed that education was very important.

Clarkebury was far grander than Mqhekezweni. The school itself consisted of a cluster of two dozen, or so, colonial-style buildings.

On the first day of classes I sported my new boots. As I clomped into the classroom, my boots crashing on that shiny wooden floor, I noticed that two girls who were sitting in the front row were watching my lame performance with great amusement. I got to know one of those girls and she became my greatest friend at Clarkebury.

I soon adapted to life at Clarkebury. I participated in sports and games as often as I could, but my performances were no better than average. Most of my classmates could outrun me on the playing field and outdo me in the classroom. I had a good deal of catching up to do.
Although I had a slow start I eventually began to find my feet and accelerated my progress, completing the junior certificate (Grade 10) in two years instead of the usual three. I developed the reputation of having a fine memory, but in fact I was simply a hard worker.

And then at the age of 21 I went to study at Fort Hare University College. But those are stories for another time.

Use your mind map to write your story.
This week you will read a Zulu folk tale. Folk tales are passed down orally, from one generation to the next. People tell these stories to their children and grandchildren – they don't write them down. Folk tales usually teach moral lessons and provide entertainment. They also unite people. Children from a particular culture all hear the same folk tales, and this makes them feel they belong together.

In most folk tales we meet animals who can talk.

Jabu was a 14-year-old herd boy. He took great pride in the way he cared for his father's large herd of cattle. One warm autumn day, as Jabu sat on the koppie watching the animals, his friend Sipho came running towards him.

"Have you heard the news, Jabu?" asked Sipho, out of breath. "Bhubesi, the lion, was seen around here last night. He killed a cow. The men are already setting traps for him. Put your cattle back in the kraal and let's go and watch the men set the traps!"

Jabu was shocked. "I can't put the cattle back into the kraal, Sipho," he said. "It's too early in the day. They need to finish grazing, and then I have to take them to the river to drink some water before I take them back home."

Sipho was disappointed, but he knew better than to argue with Jabu. "OK," he said. "I'll see you later, perhaps by the fire tonight. I'm going to watch the men." And off he ran.

Jabu began to gather the cows together, and herded them towards the river to drink. While they were drinking, he sat with his feet in the water.

Then Jabu heard a sound that shook him. "Rrrroar!" The cows all froze. It was Bhubesi, and he was very near! Jabu looked carefully around. His knees trembling, he pulled the cattle together into a tight circle. "But that roar doesn't say, 'I'm going to eat you,'" he thought. "Bhubesi sounds like he's in trouble. I think that roar was a cry for help." Jabu began to walk towards the lion.

Bhubesi was caught in one of the traps set by the men. His head was caught in the trap, and the more he struggled, the tighter the trap became. Jabu stood and stared. Never before had he seen the king of the animals so near by. He truly was a majestic animal. As Jabu watched Bhubesi struggling for his life, he started to feel sorry for him. The lion saw the boy and spoke to him.

Lion: Hawu! Mfana (boy)! Please, help me. I can’t free myself. Please, please, will you come and lift this bar that is holding my head down? Please!

Jabu looked into Bhubesi’s eyes. He could hear the desperation in the lion’s voice.

Lion: Please, mfana! Please! Before those hunters come and kill me. Please set me free!

Jabu: I would like to free you, Bhubesi. But I am afraid that as soon as I do, you will eat me.

Lion: Oh, no, mfana, I could never eat someone who set me free! I promise, I will not touch a hair on your head! I promise you that!

How do you think the story will end?

Do you think Jabu will release the lion?

- In your group, think about an ending for this story. Then make up a role play about it and present it to the class. You will need people to act as Jabu, Sipho and Bhubesi, the lion. You will also need a few cows.
- Decide which group has the best ending.
Jabu hears the lion’s roar

Let’s write

Look at the story again and then answer the questions.

1 Jabu did not want to go and see the traps because

A It was too far to walk.
B He was too tired.
C He needed to take the cattle to drink.
D He knew what the traps looked like.

2 What does the storyteller mean when she says “The cows all froze”?

A They were cold.
B They were afraid and did not move.
C They did not want to go to the river.
D They turned into ice.

3 Why were Jabu’s knees trembling?

A He was cold.
B He was afraid of the lion.
C He could not get the cattle together.
D He had hurt his knees.

4 We know that Jabu was a responsible person because

A He looked after the cows.
B He would not leave the cows unattended.
C He sat on the koppie.
D He talked to the lion.

Let’s do

Number the pictures in the correct sequence according to the story.

Sorry, I can’t go with you Sipho.
Now write a sentence to describe what is happening in each of the pictures on the previous page.

Read the passage again and underline as many verbs (or action words) as you can find. Choose five and use them to form five sentences.

Match these words with their synonyms below.

plead speak remove discover stroll pursue loosen

Write the synonyms for these verbs in the spaces provided.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>release</th>
<th>beg</th>
<th>walk</th>
<th>want</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>talk</td>
<td>take away</td>
<td>find</td>
<td>follow</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Now circle the correct form of the verb in these sentences.

Jabu thought/think of a plan to deal with the lion.

He did not know/knew the lion’s real character.

The lion made/make a promise but then he broke/break it.

Jabu’s mother cook/cooked supper for the family and they all eat/ate together.

That night the men sat/sit at the fire and speak/spoke about what happened.
Bhubesí begged and pleaded so pitifully that Jabú finally decided to trust him and set him free. He raised the bar on the trap that held the lion’s head. The lion leapt free of the trap and shook his mane.

Lion: Oh, thank you, mfana! I really owe you something. My neck was getting so stiff in that trap, and I was afraid that the hunters would kill me. Now, please, mfana, I am so thirsty – can you show me where the river is?

Jabú: It’s just down here. Come with me.

Lion: What a pity to waste such an excellent meal!

Jabú: Oh no! I saved you from the hunters, and you promised not to eat me.

Lion: Yes, you are right. I did make that promise. But somehow, now that I am free, it does not seem so important to keep that promise. I am very hungry!

Jabú: You are making a big mistake. You should never break a promise.

Lion: Hah! What nonsense! I am going to eat you now, boy. All this talking is just making me hungrier.

Jabú: But you promised, and if you break a promise, it will come back to punish you. (A wise jackal who had been listening came over to find out about the promise.)

Jackal: What promise is this? Why did you make a promise, Nkosi (great chief)?

Jabú: I freed the lion from the trap and he promised not to eat me, and now he wants to eat me.

Jackal: Oh, what a silly story. You mean my Nkosi, the great king of all the animals, was stuck in a little trap made by humans? Impossible! I don’t believe it.

Lion: It is true, it was a strong and terrible trap!

Jackal: Oh, I can’t believe anything is stronger than my king. I must see this trap. Please, before you have your dinner, show me this trap that you are speaking about. Then you can enjoy your meal.
Now you know how the story ended. Think about the following questions:

- Did the story end the way you expected it to?
- How did you feel about the lion breaking his promise?
- What is the moral of the story?
- Do you think the jackal is clever? Why do you say so?
- Sipho told Jabu that he had missed the whole adventure. Do you agree with Sipho? Why?
Thinking about the story

Think about the whole story and then write a summary that describes the events. Explain how the plot developed. You will need to think about the events at each stage.

<table>

Talk about each of the characters. Decide which of the words below best describe each character. Fill them into the correct spaces.

- cunning
- responsible
- dishonest
- wise
- courageous

Jabu was a very responsible person. He was looking after his father’s cattle when Sipho told him about the lion attack. The trees had long branches. Jabu did not go with Sipho because he had to take the cattle to the river. The cattle were tired. Jabu knew he should give extra care to his cattle.

Now write a sentence about the setting shown in each picture.

Look at the sentences below and delete those that are not about the topic. Number the remaining sentences to show the correct sequence of events.

- Jabu was a very responsible person.
- He was looking after his father’s cattle when Sipho told him about the lion attack.
- The trees had long branches.
- Jabu did not go with Sipho because he had to take the cattle to the river.

Use the adjectives to write a paragraph to describe the lion. Write the description in rough. Ask your friend to edit it and then write the revised description in the space provided.

Think about Jabu's character. Think about words that describe the way he looks and acts. Brainstorm with your friends to find as many descriptive words as you can. Then fill in the words that describe his character in the spaces below.

Use your adjectives to write a description of Jabu. Write your draft on a piece of paper. Ask your friend to edit your draft. Then write the character sketch neatly in the space provided.
Now describe the character of a real person. Choose a person to write about. The person can be a hero, living or dead.

Now fill in some adjectives that describe your character.

Use your adjectives to write a character sketch. Write the description on a piece of paper. Ask your friend to edit your draft. You can edit her/his draft. Rewrite your final sketch neatly below.
Looking at language

Look at the pictures.
Tell your partner what is happening in each one.

The present continuous tense is used for things happening now and that are continuing to happen as we talk about them.

Let's talk

Look at the pictures.
Tell your partner what is happening in each one.

Use this table to say what is happening in each picture.

Ann Likes singing, painting, cooking and reading. She does not like running, bird-watching and kite-surfing.

Jabu

Nomsa

Enver

Let’s talk

We use commas between items in a list. We use and between the last two items in a list.

A gerund is a noun formed from a verb by adding “ing”.

Read the sentences carefully. Then underline the words ending in –ing. Say why these words are nouns (or names) and not verbs.

1. I do not like the hunting of animals.
2. We do not like the shooting of rhino in South Africa.
3. The vicious killing of the rhino shocked everyone.
4. The giggling of the girls annoyed their teacher.
5. The awful wailing of the dog carried on all night.
6. The bad driving on the M1 caused an accident.
7. After running I have a shower.
8. Before sleeping I have some tea.
9. Running the tap will clear the drain.

Using commas

Looking at commas

Where there is a list of words in a sentence each word is separated from the next by a comma. The position of the comma can change the meaning of a sentence if incorrectly used.

Look at these two sentences and talk about how the position of the comma changes the meaning. Draw a picture to show what each sentence says they ate.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>We ate chocolate, jelly and cake.</th>
<th>We ate chocolate jelly and cake.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Now put commas in these sentences.

- We will need a hammer nails and a saw.
- We bought apples oranges bananas and pears.
- She stopped stared and ran.
- The monster was huge fat and spiky.
We use conjunctions or joining words to join sentences together. Without them speech and writing would sound very jerky. Look at this example.

Jim turned round. Jim bumped into the cupboard. Jim turned round and bumped into the cupboard.

"Jim" is the subject of both sentences. That is why you leave out the second "Jim" when you join the two sentences together.

You can also use "however" to join sentences. However has the same meaning as but. They both show the contrast between the two parts of the sentence. Remember: A simple sentence has one subject and one verb. A complex sentence has more than one verb and may have more than one subject. You form complex sentences when you join two sentences with a conjunction.

Join these two simple sentences to form complex sentences by using one of these conjunctions.

Then underline the verbs in each of the joined sentences.

- and
- but
- because
- so
- however

1. We wanted to play soccer. The rain spoiled our plans.
2. Ann asked me to help her with homework. I helped her.
3. I was late for school. I missed the bus.
4. They said the bridge was fixed. It was still broken.
5. She is good at maths. She is not good in Geography.
6. I like fruit. I like vegetables.
7. We used our umbrellas. It was raining.
The principal was strict. The principal was kind.

She was sick. The doctor gave her medicine.

Sam likes coffee. Ann likes tea.

She went to the shop. She bought a slab of chocolate.

He was angry. I was late.

The boys play soccer. They play cricket.

I like sweets. I don’t like cake.

I learn hard. I want to pass my exam.

I like rain. I don’t like hail.

I was happy at my uncle’s house. I missed my mother.

I liked my new school. I had to work hard to catch up.

In each of these sentences underline the nouns (naming words) and circle the verbs (action words).

John likes big Alsatian dogs.

Mary walks to Good Hill Primary School.

Jabu rode his mountain bike.

Sipho plays soccer for Little Chiefs.

Ann kept talking in class.

There was once a rabbit who was always worrying. “Oh dear,” he muttered all day long, “oh deary, deary me.”

His greatest worry was that there might be an earthquake. “For if there was,” he said to himself, “whatever would become of me?”

He was feeling particularly anxious about this one morning, when suddenly an enormous fruit fell down from a nearby tree – CRASH – making the whole earth shake.

“Earthquake!” he cried.

And with that he raced across the fields to warn his cousins.

“Earthquake! Run for your lives!”

All the rabbits left the fields and followed him, running madly. They raced across the fields, through forests and rivers into the hills, warning more cousins as they went.

Just then, he passed an elephant. “Earthquake! Run for your life!” he cried.

The elephant followed the rabbits, shaking the earth with his heavy steps.

They ran past a group of giraffes. “Earthquake! Run for your lives!” cried the rabbit.

The giraffes followed the elephant, who was following the rabbits.

By the time they reached the mountains, ten thousand rabbits, an elephant and several giraffes running like mad sounded like thunder up the slopes. The first rabbit gazed back to see if the earthquake was coming any closer, but all he could see was a great swarm of speeding animals.

As they stood there panting, a lion appeared.

“What’s happening?” the lion asked.

“Earthquake, earthquake!” babbled the rabbit.

“An earthquake?” asked the lion. “Who has seen it? Who has heard it?”

“Not I,” said the elephant.

“Not we,” said the giraffe.
“Ask him, ask him!” cried all the rabbits, pointing to the first one.
The lion turned to the rabbit.
“Please, Sir,” said the rabbit shyly, “I was sitting quietly at home when there was a terrible crash and the ground shook and I knew it must be an earthquake, Sir. So I ran as fast as I could to warn all the others to save their lives.”
“My brother, would you be brave enough to show me where this dreadful disaster happened?” asked the lion.
“Oh, I can’t ever go back there again!” said the rabbit.
“Jump on my back and I’ll take you. I will care for you,” said the lion.
So, rather timidly, the rabbit jumped onto the lion’s back and off they went, over the mountains and the hills, across the rivers, plains, forests and fields, until at last they were back at his home.
“This is where I heard it, Sir. And I felt it as well. The ground shook.”
The lion looked around – and very soon he spotted the enormous coconut which had fallen so noisily from its tree. He also saw a little monkey sitting in the tree. The lion picked up the coconut, climbed onto a rock and dropped it back onto the ground.
CRASH!
The rabbit jumped a metre high. “Earthquake! Quickly – run away – it’s just happened again!”
And then he realised that the lion was laughing, and he saw the cracked coconut at his feet.
“Oh,” he whispered. “It wasn’t really an earthquake after all, was it?”
“No,” said the lion, “it wasn’t, and you had no need to be afraid.”
“What a silly rabbit I’ve been!”
The lion smiled kindly. “Never mind little brother. All of us – even I – sometimes fear things we cannot understand.”
And with that he padded back to the ten thousand rabbits, the elephant and the giraffes, who were all still waiting on top of the mountain, to tell them that it was now quite safe to go home.

Dear Dan

Wow! I was so lucky that I could go to Cape Town with my cousins for the July school holidays. We left on 12 July and arrived the next day. It was fun to be on the train. We slept in a cabin and I had the top bunk!

When we arrived in Cape Town, the first thing I saw was Table Mountain with its covering of frothy white clouds. The mountain was more magnificent than I ever expected it to be.

Look at the photos I attached.

On our second day, we went to Robben Island. We travelled to the island by boat. There we saw the cell that Nelson Mandela was in - for 18 years! We saw lots of penguins and rocks on the island.

On the third day we saw the penguins again, this time on a beach called Boulder’s Beach. There we also saw some Cape fur seals. There is a project in Cape Town to protect the seals because they are near extinction. The project also cares for the penguins.

On the fourth day, we stood at the tip of Africa, at Cape Point, where the two oceans meet. This is where the cold water of the Atlantic Ocean meets the warm currents of the Indian Ocean.

On my fifth day, the last day, we went to see sea creatures in the Two Oceans Aquarium. That was so cool! I have never been so close to a shark before! There was only a pane of glass between us, and they were not shy to show us how many rows of teeth they had. We also saw all kinds of starfish - some had up to fifty arms! If they lose an arm, a new one grows in its place.

Tomorrow we will leave to come home. I can't wait to see you all when we are back at school.

Your friend

John

Dear Ann and Dan

I guess you have read the news about the enormous earthquake in Japan. I have come to stay with my relatives in Southern Japan and I will stay here until the situation improves back home in Tokyo. Although I was glad to get far away from the epicentre of the earthquake, I miss my family and my friends at the International Primary School that I attend.

However, I am having a good time with my cousin. He is the same age as I am. He is also 13 and we are both in Grade 6. Luckily my cousin lives near the central park, where we can play on the merry-go-round and swings.

In between playing, I spend my time doing my favourite hobbies – reading and playing games on the computer. I am reading Jungle Book and wishing that I could live in Africa. I am nearly halfway through the book.

Your friend

Kin Hosh

Who is Kin visiting?

Why did he go there?

On what date did he write the e-mail?
Now write a letter back to Kin. We have given you suggestions for each paragraph. Write your letter in rough first and let your partner check it. Then write it neatly on this page.

We know that adjectives tell us about the nouns (person, place or thing). Usually the adjective comes before the noun. Sometimes they come after the noun. Wherever you put them, they still describe the noun.

More about adjectives

About the past and the future

Past perfect tense

The past perfect tense refers to an action that happened in the past before another action in the past. This is the past in the past.

Look at these examples:
- When we arrived, the train had left.
- When I got home yesterday, my father had already cooked dinner.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>I</th>
<th>had</th>
<th>arrived. eaten.</th>
</tr>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>It</td>

<td>barked. eaten.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We</td>
<td>had</td>
<td>visited. driven.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They</td>
<td>had</td>
<td>bought. eaten.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Let's write
Now complete these sentences using had + the verb (in the past tense).

My friend offered me an apple. I was not hungry because I had

I arrived late. All my friends had

I was tired because I had not

She told me that she had just

When I arrived at school I realised I had

When the bell rang I remembered I had

When I saw my teacher I remembered I had

I was happy because I had

When I arrived at home I found my mother had

When I reached the stadium I saw that my team had Looking at the future perfect tense

The future perfect tense shows that an action will have been completed or finished at some time in the future. This tense is formed with "will" + "have" plus the past tense of the verb.

I will have spent all my money by this time next year.
I will have played in six soccer matches at the end of the season.

Think about what you will have done by the end of primary school.
Write five sentences using: I will have + verb

By the end of primary school
I will have read 50 books.

Let’s write
Now complete these sentences using will have + verb in the past tense.

By this time next week, he worked on this project for twenty days.
By this time next year we attended this school for six years and nine months.
By this time tomorrow I finished my homework.
By this time next month, I ran in the marathon.
By Christmas, I visited the Kruger National Park.
The cartoon as a genre
So far this year you have read different types of text: folklore, poetry, advertising, reports, dialogue, information text and instructional text. The comic or cartoon is another form of text. Comics have fewer words and lots of pictures so that you can see the characters. The story is told over a series of frames – some with words and some without words. You will also see that comics use many sound words.

Let's write
Let's write

The following two pages taken from a Supa Strika comic. Number 100.
(Focus on what is happening in each of the frames. Take note of the different types of bubbles used in the cartoon. Look at the bubbles showing what the commentators say in frames 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. Take note of the sound words and how they are written.)

1. 2ND HALF
   SUPA STRIKAS... RISE UP!

2. STRIKAS ARE DOMINATING PLAY! THIS IS A GOOD BUILD-UP!

3. COLD JOE CROSSES. IT'S SHAKES VS. DINGAAN!

4. OUCH! THAT'S GONNA HURT!

5. IT'S A FREE KICK WITHIN STRIKING DISTANCE!

6. SKARRAI!

7. INITIATE OPERATION SHUTDOWN!
HELLO? UNITED ARE LINING UP IN WHAT LOOKS LIKE...

HUH?

HELLO? UNITED ARE LINING UP IN WHAT LOOKS LIKE...

HUH?

HUH?

OK..... WHATEVER, BUDDY! YOUR PLAN IS ABOUT TO BACKFIRE FOR THE SECOND TIME TODAY!

BECauses TO BEAT A DOUBLE WALL...

THAT'S JUST NUTS!

NO KICK WILL EVER PENETRATE OUR DUAL WALL!

LOOKS LIKE COACH WANTS YOU TO BE THE HERO TODAY, SHAKES!

WHATEVER, BUDDY! YOUR PLAN IS ABOUT TO BACKFIRE FOR THE SECOND TIME TODAY!
Thinking about the comic

Discuss the Supa Strika comic with your friend. Then write a sentence to explain what is happening in each frame.

1. What do the Super Strika defence like doing as much as they like playing soccer?

2. What team is the Super Strika team playing against?

3. What sound does the referee’s whistle make? Why does he blow his whistle in frame 4?

4. What is the score? (Hint: Look at frames 4 and 8.)

5. Make a list of all the sound words in the comic.

6. What advertisements do you see in the comic?

7. Who are the advertisements aimed at?
Let’s talk

Cartoons for advertising

- What is your favourite TV or radio advert?
- Why do you like it?
- Would you buy the product it advertises?
- Who do they think would want to buy the product?
- Does the advertisement use a slogan about the product?

Buy the Perky Parky Remote racing car. No one should be without one. It rides on land: vrooom, vrooom! Nothing will stop it.

And it rides on water: sploooosh – whrrrrr!

With a Perky Parky you can be the most popular kid in the universe! Wow!

Popular, popular! that’s what you will be!

Cool

Wow!

Whoopee! I have a Perky Parker racing car!

Look at the advertisements and then answer these questions.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Answer</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What does the advertisement try to persuade you to do?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the advert exaggerate or promise you anything? Explain why you say so.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What word sounds are used in the advert?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who is the advert aimed at? Does it target old or young people, boys or girls?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Plan to write your own TV advertisement. Design it in the form of a cartoon.

- Start by deciding how you will add action to your advertisement.
- Will you use one person or more?
- Break up your advertisement into four scenes.
- Draw a picture to illustrate each scene.
- Write sentences that show what each person says.

Let’s write

1. What is the setting?
2. Who are the characters?
3. What is the theme or plot?

- Use a mind map to help you plan your writing.
- Write a rough draft.
- Ask a friend to edit the draft.
- Revise your text and make the necessary corrections.
- Then write it neatly in your book.
Now use your planner to help you to write up your advert. Read the adverts of your classmates. Choose one to role play for the class.

Let's do

When you have written your TV advertisement, choose members of your group to act it out to show how it would look on TV.

What is a prefix?

A prefix is not a full word. It’s a word part that is added at the beginning of a full word (called a root word). Every prefix has its own meaning. When a prefix is added to a root word, it changes the meaning of the root word.

Circle the prefixes in each of these words. Then underline the root word.

Passive voice

Write these sentences in the passive voice. We have started each one for you.

Example: The dog chews the bone. A sentence is in the active voice if the subject of the sentence performs the action.

Example: The bone was chewed by the dog. A sentence is in the passive voice if the object of the sentence is acted upon.

The window was broken by the girl.

The bear was ___________________
What is a suffix?

Suffixes are like prefixes, except that they are added to the end of a root word to change its meaning. An example: the ending -ful means “full of”, so the word beautiful means full of beauty.

Circle the suffixes in each of these words. Then underline the root word.

- walking
- cheerful
- hopeless
- backward
- walked
- hopeful
- colourful
- wonderful
- colourful
- readable
- weakness
- reckless
- neatly
- hoped
- jumped
- wooden
- forward
- dancing
- speaking
- slowly
- woollen
- playful
- quietly

  - Suffix: ful
- Root word: hopeful
  - Suffix: ness

Act out this play. You will need a mother, a father, a son and a narrator, who reads the parts between the dialogue (what the characters say to one another).

Scene: In Dan's lounge. Dan is lying on the sofa watching a soccer match on the TV. His mother and father are looking concerned because Dan is not doing his homework.

MOTHER: Dan, have you done your homework?

DAN: Um … ahh … well, sort of. Um … I don’t actually have much homework, Mom. All I have to do is write a 300 word story about something. But I just quickly want to watch the game on TV.

MOTHER: Daniel Shabalala, you had better do your homework, right now!

[DANS picks up his backpack from the floor and puts it on the table.]

DAN: Ahh, Mom! How can our teacher ask us to write a story of 300 words? I'm not William Shakespeare! Three hundred words! It’ll take forever! What will I write about? Can’t I watch Pirates and Chiefs play first? I’ll start straight after the game. I promise!

FATHER: [Takes a book out of the backpack and opens it up.] Maybe this will help. Look at this mind map in your workbook. It says you write your topic in the centre and your four main ideas in the boxes. It’s very easy! Come on, son.

DAN: But Dad, what can I write about? I’ll start with my name and surname. That gives me two words already … only 298 to go! I wish I could just watch the end of the game. Ok, ok. I’ll think. What will I write about? Mmm.

NARRATOR: The more Dan tries to find an idea, the sleepier he gets. He yawns loudly and soon he is face down on his books, fast asleep. He dreams about the game he wanted to watch. He is in the FNB Stadium sitting in the front row behind the Chiefs' goalpost. He watches nervously. His team is losing and there are only five minutes to go. The striker is limping and an injured mid-fielder has just been taken off the field. In despair, Dan jumps onto the

He is faster and more agile than any of his challengers. And then, with great concentration and using every muscle in his body, Dan scores the winning goal just as the final whistle blows.

Dan’s beaming face is shown across the country on the TV. The commentators shout, “Dan Shabalala has just scored the winning goal!” and “A new champion, Dan Shabalala! South Africa, we have a new soccer champion!”

[Mother wakes Dan up.]

MOTHER:  Dan, wake up … wake up! You have homework to do!

DAN:  Hmmm? Huh? What did you say?

FATHER:  Dan! What do you think you’re doing? You’ve got to finish your homework!

MOTHER:  Maybe your nap will give you the energy to finish your story. Do you want me to help you think of a topic for your story?

DAN:  [Grins.] Oh, it’s ok, Mom. I know exactly what I’m going to write about!

What do you think Dan will write about?

What did Dan mean when he said “I’m not William Shakespeare”?

What are the three actions that are referred to in the play?

She’s back by popular demand!

The National Children’s Theatre is proud to announce a season of Pippi Longstocking, a children’s comic tale. This production will run during the Easter school holiday, from 7 March.

Pippi is a delightful girl who lives alone in her wacky house, with a horse and a pet monkey. Pippi’s mischievous tricks are very funny, but they also get her into trouble! Children really enjoy watching what she gets up to.

She is a lovable character, and all children who see her will want to be Pippi. After the show, children will rush to the library to get a copy of the book Pippi Longstocking. Simply put, Pippi is irresistible.

Pippi Longstocking will run at The National Children’s Theatre, from 7 March until 16 April 3 Junction Avenue, Parktown, Johannesburg.

During school holidays, performances are Mondays to Saturdays at 10:30 and 14:30.

Block bookings and specials are available for schools.

Let’s write

Read the questions and then write down your answers.

What is the name of the play?

How do we know it is a funny play?

Who are the characters? Underline the main character.

Who is the target audience? Write down the information that tells you this.

Why do you think bright colours are used in this poster?

What figure of speech is "Laugh till you split your sides?"
Design a poster for a play. You could advertise "Jabu and the lion" or "Dan the football star!". Think carefully about the play you will advertise because in the next worksheet you will write a script for it. You must include:

- The name of the play in big, bold, colourful letters (you must give the play a name)
- Who is acting in the play
- Where it will be held
- The dates and the times of the performances
- A brief description of what the play is about
- Booking information

Look at the posters designed by your friends and choose one that you like best. In the next worksheet you will write the script for the play.

More about adverbs and adjectives

Adverbs tell us more about a verb or an action. They answer questions about How? When? Where? or Why? an action took place. They describe:

- Manner or how something happens: gently, slowly, quickly, loudly.
- Place or where something happens: here, there, far, inside, backward, forwards.
- Time or when something happens: before, after, today, tomorrow.
- Frequency or how often something happens: always, never, sometimes, often, seldom.
- Degree or the extent that something happens: almost, nearly, barely, hardly.
- Certainty or how likely it is that something will happen: definitely, probably, likely.

Underline the adverbs in these sentences and then circle the verb. Indicate whether it is an adverb of manner, time, place, frequency, degree or certainty.

What is instructional text?

Over the next two weeks you will focus on instructional text. The purpose of this kind of text is to tell the reader how to do or make something. The information is broken up into small, sequenced steps. The most common example of an instructional text is a recipe. Other common examples include instructions for using appliances and rules for games.

This instructional text is about a game called Spud. It gives instructions on how to play the game.

What you need

- A soft rubber ball.
- Five or more players.
- An outdoor space.

Where to play

A flat outdoor area away from windows and far from the road.

The aim of the game

To be the last player in the game: players who are given letters are out of the game when the letters spell the word S–P–U–D.
Rules of the game

1. Each player takes a secret number from a box. Alternatively, one needs to say who gives the number, e.g. “Your teacher will give each player a secret number.”

2. Choose a player to start the game. He or she takes the ball. The player who has the ball is called It.

3. It throws the ball into the air and calls a number. The player who has this number becomes It and must catch the ball. All the other players must run away.

4. It shouts SPUD. All the players must freeze.

5. It takes three large steps towards another player and throws the ball at the player’s feet. The other players must not move.

6. If It hits the player or if he or she moves then that player becomes It and gets the letter S (for SPUD). The next time the player is hit, he or she gets the letter P and when hit again the U and then D.

7. When a player receives four penalty letters (S P U D) he or she is out and the game continues without him or her.

Let’s write

Now answer these questions about the rules of Spud.

What is the minimum number of players needed to play the game?

What must the players do when It calls “SPUD”?

In what places should you not play the game?

Which picture best matches Rule 5?
Recipe for French Toast

Ingredients
- 2 eggs
- 1–4 cup of milk
- 4 thick slices of bread
- A pinch of salt
- two teaspoons of jam

Method

☐ Cook the slices of bread, turning them when they are brown.
☐ Serve with jam.
☐ Cover the base of a non-stick frying pan with a thin layer of oil.
☐ Beat the eggs and milk.
☐ Dip both sides of each slice of bread into the milk mixture.
Let’s write Work out what utensils you will need to make French toast. List them.

Now compare the instructions in the recipe with the instructions (or rules) for playing SPUD. In what way are the two sets of instructions similar?

In what way do the two sets of instructions differ?

When we give instructions we often need to use technical terms. Look at these phrases about cell phones and then explain to your friend what they mean.

Adverbs of time, manner and place

What are the different types of adverbs?

As you saw in the previous worksheets, most adverbs tell us how, in what way, when and where something is done. In other words, they describe the manner, place or time of an action.

Looking at adverbs

Adverbs of manner often end in -ly. They are formed by adding –ly to an adjective.

Underline all the adverbs that John uses in his speech. Then circle the verbs they describe.

I played a magnificent game of soccer last night. I ran speedily, I attacked viciously and I scored three goals quite easily. I nearly scored a fourth. I played so well that the coach said if I practised more often I could become a Bafana Bafana star one day. The crowd screamed loudly whenever I scored.

One day I will become a professional football player, I may even become the Bafana Bafana captain!

Now underline all the adjectives that Ann uses in her speech.

Do you know what pet I have? I have an amazing little spider. It makes a great pet! It is friendly too. My brother wanted a small black kitten. Kittens are very cute but I think a spider is much more fun. It’s a lot less expensive to feed and it’s small enough to carry around with me all day! Some of my friends are scared of the spider but it’s harmless. My spider is much more interesting that everyone else’s boring pets! When I grow up I want to study Zoology. I think eight-legged creatures are wonderful.

Now write a description of a game you played or a pet you have. Use descriptive adjectives and different types of adverbs.
Let’s talk

Look at the pictures on this page and discuss what you think the text is about. Discuss these questions with your partner.

- How do people get to space?
- What are these people called?
- What do astronauts wear when they walk in space?
- Do you know why they have to wear special clothing?

Let’s read

Now read these instructions for putting on a space suit.

1. First the spacewalkers put on something that looks like long underwear. It is made of elastic with rubber tubes sewn into it. Water will flow through these tubes to keep the astronauts cool since their body heat has no way to escape once they are sealed into their spacesuits.

2. Next the spacewalkers pull on the lower half of their suit, which is made in one piece – big, rigid boots attached to bulky, flexible, insulated pants. On earth the astronauts would have to lie on the floor to wriggle into the pants. In space, they can slip into them while floating in mid-air.

3. The spacewalkers float into the airlock and slide into the upper halves of their suits. The upper half is a hard shell with flexible arms. The astronaut’s head sticks out through a metal ring at the neck, where the helmet will be connected, and the hands stick out through two metal rings where gloves will attach. This part of the spacesuit is very heavy on earth. It provides the oxygen supply, the water, the fans and the batteries.

4. When the space-walking partners are inside their suits, another astronaut (one who will stay inside) helps lock the pieces of each suit together. Before putting on the helmets, the astronauts put on caps that have radio speakers inside the earflaps and microphones that stick out in front of their mouths so that they can talk with each other and with the rest of the crew.
5 All of this takes several hours. But at last, they are ready to put on the helmets and big, awkward gloves. They adjust their caps and scratch their noses one last time. They will not be able to do these things again until the space work is over.

6 The astronaut who has been helping leaves the airlock and closes the hatch. In their big, bulky suits, the two spacewalkers almost fill the small space. They wait alone in the airlock for several minutes while the air is gradually pumped out. They can feel their ears popping as they wait for the pressure gauge to show that the air is gone.

7 Finally they can open the hatch and reach out into space. Before they float out of the airlock, they have to hook thin wires between their suits and the shuttle. These wires keep the astronauts from drifting away from the space shuttle.

8 Floating out into space, the spacewalkers become human satellites. They are orbiting the earth! They don’t need the space shuttle, at least for a while, because their spacesuits have enough air and battery power to keep them alive for about seven hours. There is even a food stick and a bag of water inside each helmet. They move into the shuttle’s cargo bay. This is the area where the tools they need for space work are kept, in a big tool chest. They remove the tools they want and hook them to their wrists or waists. Working in a spacesuit is not easy. Their fingers, hands and arms get tired because every move they make means pushing against part of the spacesuit from inside. When it’s time to rejoin the rest of the crew inside the space shuttle, after several hours outside, the spacewalkers float back into the airlock. But even though they may be tired, they pause to take one last look at the view of the earth and the sky before they close the door on outer space.

How do we find out whether people like or dislike someone, or something? One way is to interview them and ask them what they think about the person or thing. An interview like that has to be prepared, otherwise we might forget what questions to ask, or we might ask the wrong questions. So we draw up a questionnaire, which we use during the interview. Use the questionnaire below to find out what your friends think about school and what they would like to change. The last question says “Other”. This is where you can fill in any question you like, as long as it is on the same subject. Ask ten friends to answer yes or no to these questions.

Question 5: Did your friends agree that learners should be consulted about school rules?

Question 6: What “other” question did you ask?

What did your friends think about the question you asked above.

Now that you have found out what people think about these things, what changes do you think should be made to the school system?
We are all people of the world. We live everywhere, in crowded cities and in tiny towns. We live on white frozen planes and in hot green forests. We live in deserts, on mountain sides, and on islands in the sea.

We come in many colours. Some of us have warm, tan skins like sunlight on sand. Some of us have deep brown skins like rich chocolate. Some of us have rosy pink skins the colour of the sky at dawn. And some of us have skins touched with red. Our eyes and hair are different colours too. We have blue eyes, brown eyes, grey eyes or green eyes. Our hair is blond or brown or red or black. It may be straight or curly.

We come in all shapes and sizes. Some of us are tall and some are short. Some of us are thin and some of us are plump. We have many different ways of life and many different beliefs and customs. We like different sorts of foods. We build our houses in different ways. We belong to many different families, groups, tribes and nations.

But we are very much alike in many important ways. We all need food to eat. We all want to be safe, comfortable and happy. We all need love and friendship. We all like beautiful things.

And we all belong to one big family – the human family of nearly 7 billion people. We all have the same ancestors. Yes, we are all people of planet Earth, and we all began here, in South Africa.

(Source: World book: Childcraft, vol 8:7)

Let's write

The author mentions seven different kinds of places where people live. List them.

Mention the four ways in which the author says people are different.

In what ways are we all the same?
All humans need food, clothing and shelter to stay alive. But we do not eat the same kinds of food. We do not wear the same kinds of clothes. Nor do we live in the same kinds of houses. Our families are different too.

Chloe is an Eskimo. She is 12 years old. She lives in northern Canada. She and her family live in the coldest part of the world and they dress in clothes made of animal skins to keep warm. They eat whale fat as well as bear and seal meat. The rich fat in these foods helps to keep their bodies warm. In the past, Eskimos lived in snow igloos or tents made of animal skins. Today they live in heated homes.

John lives in England. He is also 13 years old. He has been going to school since he was 3. He likes to eat fish and chips. He wears a school uniform and goes to school by bicycle in the summer. He’s mad about soccer.

Ruth lives in Israel, on a kibbutz, which is a kind of farm. Ruth is 11 years old. On a kibbutz, parents and children do not live together. Parents stay in a house for grown-ups and the children stay in a house for children. Ruth goes to school on the farm and eats her lunch at the school.

Thirteen-year-old Adil lives in Malaysia in a village. The village has only one house. It is called a long house and can provide a home for as many as 50 families. The families elect a head for their big house.

Kwi is 7 years old. He lives in the desert in Botswana. He belongs to the San people. His father hunts wild animals for food. Kwi will go to a boarding school when he is older. Now he learns about his history through the songs and stories that his family tells him.

Eleven-year-old Kofi is from a village in Ghana. He lives in an Ashanti house with his mother and his mother’s mother. In this house, Kofi calls all the women “mother”, and all the children are his brothers or sisters.

The lines of latitude and longitude shown on the map are imaginary lines that we use to find places on earth. The lines of latitude run from east to west (or left to right), and the lines of longitude run from the north pole to the south pole (top to bottom). So they cross one another.

Schoolboy (9) stumbles over the first human

15 August 2008

CRADLE OF HUMANKIND, South Africa — Nine-year-old Matthew Berger dashed after his dog, Tau, into the high grass here at Maropeng one sunny morning. He tripped over a log and stumbled onto a major archaeological discovery. “Dad, I’ve found a fossil!” Matthew cried out to his father, Dr Lee Berger, who had been searching for the bones of our ancient human ancestors for almost 20 years.

Young Matthew held the remains of a boy 1.27 metres tall, who had been just a few years older than Matthew himself when he died. When Dr Berger went over to find out why Matthew was calling him, he was surprised to see that his son was holding the collar bone of a hominid.

“I couldn’t believe it! I felt quite giddy,” Dr Berger said later. “And I almost died [of surprise].”

Dr Berger and a team of scientists said the fossils showed that the boy was a species of hominid. Hominids are the ancestors of human beings and other close relatives of humans.

The scientists named the species Sediba (which is a Sotho word that means fountain or water spring). The species walked upright on long legs but still climbed through trees. It had the same small teeth and facial features as modern humans, but its feet were primitive and its brain was very small. The scientists’ studies show the Sediba species lived about 1.78 million to 1.95 million years ago.

Dr Berger and his fellow researchers from the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg have, since then, found much more of the boy’s skeleton, including his skull. They think it is possible that he and his family were looking for water and that other animals who were hunting them forced them to the edge of a ledge, from where they plunged to their deaths down a shaft 30 to 45 metres deep.
Imagine you are nine-year-old Matthew Berger. Write a diary entry for what happened that day.

Mrs Ples and Little Foot

We live on a planet that is constantly changing. Sometimes the changes are caused by natural forces, like earthquakes and the movement of the oceans. But some of the damage is done by humans, through the pollution of rivers and oceans and the destruction of the rainforests. All of these changes cause us to lose something that your children may never see, such as the rainforests or majestic animals like the Bengal tiger, which is almost extinct. We need to protect our heritage for future generations – your children and grandchildren.

What is a heritage site?
The United Nations Education and Science Organisation (UNESCO) asks countries to say which sites in their lands are important so that they can be protected. UNESCO then evaluates them, and if the sites are important enough, UNESCO declares them as world heritage sites. South Africa has eight world heritage sites.

Robben Island is one of them. Another very important site is the Cradle of Humankind, where scientists say the first humans came from.

Why is this site important?
Fossils were found in a cave at a site bordering both Gauteng and North West, near the city of Krugersdorp. It is believed that these are the skeletons of some of the first near-humans to live on earth.

How were the fossils found?
Scientists started digging up the remains of prehistoric bodies in about 1890, when miners looking for gold said they were finding many fossils under the ground. The scientists found fossils of the skeletons of near-humans who lived on earth millions of years ago.
In 1947, Dr Robert Broom found the skull of an adult female, a prehistoric near-human called Plesianthropus transvaalensis in the Sterkfontein caves. People found this name very difficult to remember, so they gave the skull a nickname: Mrs Ples.

When did she live?

Mrs Ples lived millions of years ago, before fire was discovered or the first iron tools were made. Scientists believe that these hominids were the forefathers of modern people and that the human race originated in this vicinity. This is why it is called the Cradle of Humankind.

What other evidence do we have of the first humans coming from Africa?

In 1995, another scientist, Ronald Clarke, discovered the remains of another hominid in the same area. This skeleton was called Little Foot, because when scientists dug up the skeleton, the bones of a foot were the first parts they found.

Because of the importance of these discoveries, UNESCO declared the area around the caves a world heritage site in 2000.

“It’s Book Week soon!” said Mrs Maharaj. Tumi and the rest of the class sat up, pleased. Book Week meant competitions and outings to the library in the town and lots of stories.

“This year the Book Week theme is wildlife,” said Mrs Maharaj. “So we are going to draw posters and write stories about animals that are endangered and may become extinct. You remember, we talked about those last week.” She pointed at some pictures stuck up on the wall.

“Some animals are in danger because people hunt them for their fur,” said Tumi, who always knew everything. “And sometimes they die out because they can’t get the right things to eat.”

“You’re right, Tumi,” said Mrs Maharaj. “So, children,” she went on, “start thinking about your posters and stories about these kinds of animals.”

Some of the class drew pandas and bears. Some drew rhinos and cheetahs. Some drew the dodo and the South African quagga. But most of them – including Tumi – wrote about the dinosaur. Not just any old dinosaur, but a very special one. They wrote about the iguanodon, which they had learned about the previous week.

Tumi remembered the picture of the monster very well. It had two short forelegs and a short, but very thick tail. On its feet were five stubby toes. It had five fingers on each hand and a sharp, horny thumb. The iguanodon ate plants – and anything made from plants.

All the schools in the community took part in the town’s Library Book Week. For some weeks before, the children were busy drawing and painting posters which would be sent to the library.
When the day came for the posters and stories to be displayed at the library, Tumi’s class piled into the school’s bus and set off. It was a cold winter’s day and the wind was blowing.

When they arrived, the first thing the children did was to look for their posters.

“Here’s mine!” said Tumi. It showed a smiling dinosaur with a flower hanging out of its mouth, to show it was the kind of dinosaur that ate plants.

“Here’s my story about the polar bear!” said Anna.

“And here’s what I wrote about the rhino!” said Thami proudly.

When all the children had arrived, Mrs Motha, the librarian, said, “I’ve got a surprise for you.”

So the children sat down on the floor, and they wondered what the surprise could be.

Then the door opened and in marched a polar bear wearing a beautiful patchwork waistcoat, followed by a lion and a panda. “They’re real!” shouted one child. “No, no,” said another. “They’re dressed up. They’re just people dressed up.”

The polar bear did a little dance, jogging from side to side. Then she went round, shaking hands with all the children.

Do you have a Book Week at your school or in your town? What is it like?

Tumi gives two reasons why animals die out. What are they?

Are the dodo and quagga already extinct or threatened with extinction? Do you know what they look like?

What did Tumi like about Book Week?

What was the name of the dinosaur the children knew about?

Is the lion threatened with extinction? Why do you say so?

What do the words in bold mean? Discuss this with a partner.
Mrs Motha was just getting ready to start reading a story when the door opened and another figure loped in, waving its scaly head from side to side.

“Isn’t that good!” said one of the teachers. “That’s the best costume of all!”

“Oh, look!” said the children. “It’s an iguanodon.”

“Well!” said Mrs Motha. “A dinosaur!” She was a little surprised because she didn’t remember ordering a dinosaur costume.

The dinosaur hopped over to the children as if it was looking for someone. Then it spotted Tumi right at the back. It hopped over to him and shook him by the hand. “Hullo!” said Tumi.

All the children wanted to shake hands with the dinosaur, so it went round holding out a scaly paw to them all. The dinosaur then sat down beside Tumi. It yawned, put its head on its paws and fell asleep. Tumi tried to tell Mrs Motha about the dinosaur, but she wanted him to wait until she had read the story of the polar bear.

Tumi could not listen to the story because a very strange sound started coming from the creature next to him. The dinosaur was snoring. The sound got louder and louder. Everyone turned round to have a look.

“Just ignore him,” said Mrs Motha.

The story ended and still the dinosaur slept on. All the children got up and started to look at the books. Mrs Motha was showing some children a book about birds, when she heard a voice behind her. It was the school principal.

“Sorry,” said the principal. “I meant to get over earlier. Did it go all right? I see the costumes arrived.”

“But,” said Mrs Motha, looking puzzled, “if it isn’t you in the dinosaur costume, who is it?”

The iguanodon lived about 130 million years ago, eating plants, weighing about 2 000 kg, and standing nearly 3 metres at the hips and 6 to 10 metres tall. It gets its name from having teeth like the iguana lizard.
“I tried to tell you,” said Tumi. “I knew it wasn’t someone dressed up.”

“Eeek!” said someone else, pointing to a section of the bookshelves. The dinosaur was eating its way through a book called Great Oceans and Rivers of the World.

Tumi tried to explain. “It’s an iguanodon,” he said to Mrs Motha. “They eat plants and of course paper comes from wood and wood comes from trees and trees are plants. That’s why it likes paper.”

The children watched the dinosaur eating through Chapter Six of the book about oceans. “Oh dear,” said Mrs Motha, “this is not good at all.” The dinosaur spotted a pile of new storybooks. The brightly coloured covers were hard and shiny. “Crunch!” went the dinosaur. “Crunch!” And the first story book vanished between its huge jaws.

And everybody tried to think of a way to get rid of the dinosaur.

Nobody wants a dinosaur to eat their library. So what could the children in this story do to get the dinosaur away from the library? Discuss this and then role play your ideas for the class.

After you have seen the different role plays, decide which one is the best and write down that solution. Now you have an ending to the story of The Monster in the Library.
Look back at this story. Answer these questions.

What events were planned for Book Week?

What does the iguanodon look like? Read the description in the story and then draw it.

Write a summary in the form of a diary entry saying what happened in the library today. Write in the first person using “I” and in the past tense.

Dear Diary

Today a monster came into the library and began to eat the books.
Let's talk

Talk to your friend about this table, and use it to help you to practise forming negative sentences using don't and doesn't.

<table>

<th>I</th>
<th>don't</th>
<th>like rugby.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>You</td>
<td>doesn't</td>
<td>cross the road when the robot is red.</td>

<td>eat lots of sweets.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It</td>
<td></td>
<td>watch television every day.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>snow in South Africa.</td>

Now write the short form for these negatives

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>do not</th>
<th>does not</th>

Now use the table and any other examples you can think of to write sentences in the negative form using contractions. We've done the first one for you.

He doesn't like rugby.

Looking at contractions

We form contractions by joining two words and inserting the apostrophe to show letters have been omitted.
Plan to write a story or a fairy-tale. First fill in your ideas on this mind map. Then use the mind map in writing your story on the next page.

- Who are the characters?

- What is the plot?

- What is the setting?

- What happens first?

- What happens next?

- How does it end?

- What is the title of your story?

---

- Use a mind map to help you plan your writing.
- Write a rough draft.
- Ask a friend to edit the draft.
- Revise your text and make the necessary corrections.
- Then write it neatly in your book.
Vusi is just behind his friend Mike, who is opening the tent zip. Vusi jumps with shock as his friend lets out a blood-curdling yell, and crashes into Bongi, who is right behind him.

“S...s...snake!” screeches Mike, as he reverses into Vusi.

Vusi’s dad, Mr Mosoma, comes rushing from the camp fire. “How sure are you that it’s a snake?” he asks, hiding a smile as he looks at the three shivering children.

“Its tongue shoots in and out of its mouth, Dad, and it looks like a huge lizard!” gasps Vusi.

“Please wait here, all of you, while I fetch a torch from the jeep. Perhaps it isn’t a snake.”

Bongi touches Mike’s shoulder. “How can it not be a snake? Do you know of any other animal that has a tongue shooting out of its mouth?” she asks.

Mike and Vusi shake their heads. They don’t have an explanation.

Mr Mosoma returns with a torch in one hand and a shovel in the other. He calls Vusi to his side.

“Vusi, hold the torch for me so that I can get a good grip on the shovel,” he says.

“Why me, Dad?” asks Vusi in a small voice.

“Don’t worry; I’ll go in first to look for the reptile.”
Mr Mosoma lifts the tent door with one hand and Vusi shines the torch into the tent. The three children come a little closer, still keeping a safe distance between themselves and the tent.

“Yes, that’s what I thought,” mutters Mr Mosoma, turning to the children. “A Cape monitor. But how did it get in here? I thought I told you to fasten the tent floor to the sides.”

Vusi looks at his tackies and the other two look at each other and shrug. They were in a hurry that morning, as usual. Vusi decides it is time to change the subject. “What’s a Cape monitor, Dad? Does it bite or spit?”

Bongi is fascinated by the appearance of the giant lizard. In the torch light, white blocks stand out in a shiny pattern on its scaly black skin. It has long black nails on all four wrinkled paws. She jumps with fright as the animal lets out a loud hiss.

“Be careful, kids, this is a nasty piece of work. If it bites you, we will need a crow bar to open those jaws,” says Mr Mosoma.

“Gross!” mumbles Mike as he moves back out of the circle of light.

Write two paragraphs about time that you have spent camping in the bushveld. (If you have never been camping, describe what you think it would be like.) Use the following words to help you. Describe how you felt, what it smelled like, what you heard, the texture of the grass and trees.

My bushveld experience
Have you ever felt that you want to give up? That things are just too difficult? Do you have problems that take your mind away from your school work?

Let’s read about a child who did not give up.

My name is Obert Maguvhe. I was born in 1967 in a rural village in Venda, in the Limpopo province. When I was six I got measles, a common childhood disease. I was unlucky – there were complications, and I went blind. I felt hopeless, powerless and lost. How was I ever going to go on with life?

I attended the Bosele School for the Blind in 1973, and there I learned to read in Braille. I took full advantage of the good education. I knew I had to get a good matric. School children sometimes don’t realise how important it is to work hard at school, and they regret it later in life.

After school, in 1987, I went to study at the University of the North in Limpopo, and in 1991, I started postgraduate studies at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg. I wanted to study to become a lawyer. I knew of many blind lawyers. But my grandmother said I should become a teacher. She was right – that’s where my heart is.

In 1997, I obtained a Fullbright Fellowship. This meant that I could go to America to study for a Master’s degree at Boston College. I was bowled over. Me, Obert Maguvhe, off on a plane to some place far from my home in a rural village in Venda! Next stop America! I couldn’t imagine it. But I got on that plane, and I made that journey. I lived alone in the United States and did the two-year programme in just twelve months. My professors thought I was an exceptional student and I came back home a year earlier than we all expected.

Seven years after I came back from the US, I completed my doctorate at the University of Pretoria. Anything is possible if you believe in yourself and you’re prepared to work hard. The sky is the limit!

Something that helped me believe in myself at an early age was that my father expected me to do all the chores done by non-disabled children, like herding cattle and goats and weeding our mealie field. Strangely enough, my best friend in the village was a deaf boy. Although we didn’t use sign language to communicate, we understood each other and we played together like any other kids. We moulded animals and birds from clay, we swam, we milked the goats and we climbed trees. So although I couldn’t see, and my friend couldn’t hear, it never occurred to me that these things made us somehow less than anyone else.

In 2008 I joined the Department of Basic Education to direct a section of the Kha Ri Gude literacy campaign. The campaign aims to teach 3.5 million South African adults to learn to read and write, and my section is in charge of teaching blind adults to read in Braille. We can’t use our eyes to read, so we use our fingers!

I was excited in 2013 when I was appointed as an Associate Professor at the University of South Africa. In my new post I am required to train teachers to teach children who have disabilities. It is wonderful to be in a position to help others.

My message for young people is to study all you can while you’re at school. Don’t let hard times or sadness get you down. All of us deserve to have our dreams, and all it takes to make them come true is hard work!
Fill in what happened in Dr Obert Maguvhe's life in these years. Go back and read his biography again if you can't remember all the details. You may have to calculate the years if they are not given in the story.

What special message does Obert have for all young people?

An autobiography is a story that someone writes about his or her own life. A biography is written by someone else. This autobiography was written for you by Obert.

What is Braille?

Braille is a system used by blind people to read and write, using their fingers. Each letter of the alphabet is represented by a pattern of raised dots, which they can feel and recognise with their fingertips. The table below shows you what the Braille alphabet looks like.

Verb phrases

Verb phrases refer to the verbs and the helping words such as was, is, am, are.

Underline the verbs in these sentences and then circle the words that help the verbs.

- I am waiting for Ann.
- The school bus is coming.
- My bike was tied to the tree.
- John is eating an apple.
- The children are playing in the park.
- My kite was blown away.
- Our class is going to the zoo.

Fun with puns

Read these puns and talk about their double meanings.

- A boiled egg for breakfast is hard to beat.
- Being struck by lightning is a shocking experience!
- Time flies like an arrow. Fruit flies like bananas.
- I’ve been to the dentist many times so I know the drill.

Noun phrases

A noun phrase is a group of words in a sentence that acts like a noun.

- Joseph went to town. (Joseph is a noun.)
- My big brother went to town. (My big brother is a noun phrase.)

Underline the noun phrases in these sentences.

- My little sister is six.
- My brother had a party.
- The big house was on fire.
- The old lady cleaned her house.
- My beautiful flowers drooped in the sun.
- My old bike was stolen.
- The high mountain was covered in cloud.

Can you remember these figures of speech?

Metaphor

A metaphor compares two things by saying one thing is something else. It does not use like or as.

- Example: She has a heart of gold.

Assonance

Words with the same vowel sound are used to mimic or repeat the sound of the thing you are writing about, or to suggest a mood.

- Example: Do you like blue shoes?
Read the poem Macavity the Mystery Cat. Dramatise the poem to demonstrate the mysterious ways of the cat.

- Circle the words in the poem that rhyme.
- Look up the words that appear in bold in the text. Write down their meanings in the box along the side of the poem.

Macavity, the mystery cat

Macavity’s a mystery cat, he’s called the hidden paw –
For he’s the master criminal who can defy the law.
He’s the bafflement of Scotland Yard, the Flying Squad’s despair:
For when they reach the scene of crime – Macavity’s not there!

Macavity, Macavity, there’s no one like Macavity,
He’s broken every human law, he breaks the law of gravity.
His powers of floating would make a fakir stare,
But when you reach the scene of crime – Macavity’s not there!
You may seek him in the basement, you may look up in the air –
But I tell you once and once again, Macavity’s not there!

Macavity’s a ginger cat, he’s very tall and thin;
You would know him if you saw him, for his eyes are sunken in.
His brow is deeply lined with thought, his head is highly domed;
His coat is dusty from neglect, his whiskers are uncombed.
He sways his head from side to side, with movements like a snake;
And when you think he’s half asleep, he’s always wide awake.
Macavity, Macavity, there’s no one like Macavity,
For he’s a fiend in feline shape, a monster of depravity.
You may meet him in a by-street, you may see him in the square –
But when a crime’s discovered, then Macavity’s not there!

He’s outwardly respectable. (They say he cheats at cards.)
And his footprints are not found in any files of Scotland Yard’s.
And when the larder’s looted, or the jewel case is rifled,
Or when the milk is missing, or another Peke’s been stifled,
Or the greenhouse glass is broken, and the trellis past repair –
There’s the wonder of the thing! Macavity’s not there!

Macavity, Macavity, there’s no one like Macavity,
There never was a Cat of such deceitfulness and suavity.
He always has an alibi, or one or two to spare:
And whatever time the deed took place –
MACAVITY WASN’T THERE!
And they say that all the Cats whose wicked deeds are widely known
(I might mention Mungojerrie, I might mention Griddlebone)
Are nothing more than agents for the Cat who, all the time,
Just controls their operations: the Napoleon of crime!

Macavity, Macavity, there’s no one like Macavity,
He’s a fiend in feline shape, a monster of depravity.
You may meet him in a by-street, you may see him in the square
But when a crime’s discovered then Macavity
Macavity, Macavity, Macavity –

When a crime’s discovered, then Macavity’s not there!

TS Elliot (with amendments)
Thinking about the mystery cat

Let’s read

Read the poem aloud and then talk about the description of the cat. Which of these pictures represents Macavity?

Let’s write

Which sentences in the poem tell you how Macavity looks?

What, in the description of Macavity, tells us he is intelligent?

What does the “Napoleon of crime” mean?

Why is the cat called the “hidden paw”?

The poet uses personification when he describes Macavity as having human characteristics. What human features does he say the cat has?
Now write a poem of your own about a clever animal. Describe the features of the animal. What does it do that makes it clever? Discuss the animal with your group. Write down words that describe the animal. Then add words that rhyme with the words you already have. Use the rhyming words at the end of each pair of lines. Write a draft on rough paper before you write your poem in your book.

Let's write
We all know the story about Red Riding Hood and the wolf.

Read this poem aloud as a group. You will see it is very similar to the story you know, except that the poet twists the story to show that the girl defends herself against the wolf.

As soon as Wolf began to feel
That he would like a decent meal,
He went and knocked on Grandma’s door.
When Grandma opened it, she saw
The sharp white teeth, the horrid grin,
And Wolfie said, “May I come in?”
Poor Grandmamma was terrified,
“He’s going to eat me up!” she cried.
And she was absolutely right.
He ate her up in one big bite.
But Grandmamma was small and tough,
And Wolfie wailed, “That’s not enough!
I haven’t yet begun to feel
That I have had a decent meal!”
He ran around the kitchen yelping,
“I’ve got to have a second helping!”
Then added with a frightful leer,
“I’m therefore going to wait right here
Till Little Miss Red Riding Hood
Comes home from walking in the wood.”
He quickly put on Grandma’s clothes,
(Of course he hadn’t eaten those).
He dressed himself in coat and hat.
He put on shoes, and after that,
He even brushed and curled his hair,
Then sat himself in Grandma’s chair.
In came the little girl in red.
She stopped. She stared. And then she said,
“What great big ears you have, Grandma.”
“All the better to hear you with,”
the Wolf replied.
“What great big eyes you have, Grandma.”
said Little Red Riding Hood.
“All the better to see you with,”
the Wolf replied.
He sat there watching her and smiled.
He thought, I'm going to eat this child.
Compared with her old Grandmamma, she's going to taste like caviar.
Then Little Red Riding Hood said, "But Grandma, what a lovely great big furry coat you have on."

"That's wrong!" cried Wolf.
"Have you forgot
To tell me what big teeth I've got?
Ah well, no matter what you say,
I'm going to eat you anyway."
The small girl smiles. Her black belt drops.

She gives the wolf karate chops. She aims them at the creature's head,
A few chops later she sees him dead.

Some weeks later, in the wood,
I came across Miss Riding Hood.
But what a change! No cloak of red,
No silly hood upon her head.
She said, "Hello, and do please note
My lovely furry wolfskin coat."

Roald Dahl (with adaptations)

Let's write
What parts of this poem are similar to the Red Riding Hood fairy tale?

How is the ending of the poem different from the ending of the fairy tale? (How does the girl defend herself?)

How do we know the poet met Red Riding Hood? (Look at the last verse of the poem.)

Make up a role play of the poem. You will need the following characters: Red Riding Hood, the grandmother, the wolf and the poet.
Read the limericks and then answer the questions.

There once was a poor boy named Sid
Who thought he knew more than he did.
He thought that a shark
Would flee if you bark.
And he swam out to try it ... poor kid!

A painter, who lived in Great Britain,
Interrupted two girls with their knitting.
He said, with a sigh,
“That park bench you know I
Just painted it, right where you’re sitting.”

I need a front door for my hall;
The replacement I bought was too tall.
So I hacked and I chopped it
And carefully lopped it;
And now the dumb thing is too small.
Let’s write

How many lines does a limerick have?

Which lines rhyme?

How many syllables are there in each line?

Let’s write

Now write your own limerick, starting like this:

There once was a girl called Jill

Now make a list of words that rhyme with the last word in the first line – in this case, Jill. Your list of rhyming words might include: hill, drill, pill, skill, bill, will and ill.

Let’s write

Try this one using words that rhyme with Ben. You could use words like ten, hen, pen, when or then.

There was once a boy called Ben

Try this one using words that rhyme with Ben. You could use words like ten, hen, pen, when or then.
Have you ever seen an iguana?
How do they feel?
What are they like?

I’m walking with my iguana
When the temperature rises to above eighty-five,
my iguana is looking like he’s coming alive.
So we make it to the beach, my iguana and me,
then he sits on my shoulder as we stroll by the sea …
Well if anyone sees us we’re a big surprise,
my iguana and me on our daily exercise,
till somebody phones the local police
says I’ve got an alligator tied to a leash.
It’s the spines on his back that make him look grim,
but he just loves to be tickled under his chin.
And I know that my iguana is ready for bed
when he puts on his pyjamas and lays down his sleepy head.
And I’m walking with my iguana
With my iguana…
and my piranha
and my chihuahua
and my chinchilla,
with my gorilla,
my caterpillar…
and I’m walking with my iguana…

Let’s write

Read the poem carefully and then answer these questions.

Do you think the writer was really walking with his iguana or is this just a funny poem? Why do you say so?

The writer talks about the temperature being 85°F. What is this temperature in Celsius?

Why do you think people might think the iguana is an alligator?

Would you be surprised to see someone taking his pet iguana for a walk? Why?

Would you phone the police if you saw such a sight? Why?

What words rhyme in this poem? Mention four pairs of rhyming words.

UN adds some iguanas to its endangered species list

22 March 2010 – The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) is adding several reptiles to its endangered species trade list. The purpose of the list is to stop people all over the world from trading with animals that are threatened with extinction.

Four species of iguanas were added to the list. The protected iguanas are caught and sold to people, mainly in Europe and the United States, who want to own them as unusual, exotic pets. Putting these iguana species on the list means that governments can regulate their trade.
Hooray! Hooray! It's New Year's Day!

The day we start anew.
So this year I've decided to become a kangaroo.

Or maybe I will learn to fly,
or how to walk through walls,
or how to turn invisible,
or surf on waterfalls.

I'll make myself elastic
and I'll teach myself to shrink.
I'll turn into a liquid
and I'll pour me down the sink.

I'll visit other planets
and meet aliens galore.
I'll travel to the distant past and ride a dinosaur.

I've got so many wondrous plans.
I'm starting right away.
Yes, this will be the best year yet.
Hooray! It's New Year's Day!
